

Reasonable adjustments

The Equality Act 2010 says all health and care services must be easy to access for people with disabilities.

These are called reasonable adjustments.

This includes people with:

- a physical disability
- a sensory disability
- a learning disability
- autism
- a long term condition such as dementia.

Reasonable adjustments can sometimes be small changes such as:

- Giving you information in an easy read format
- Installing a ramp
- Giving a quiet room for people to wait in
- Providing a longer appointment time

Reasonable adjustments are individual. They should be tailored to meet your needs.

It's really important to speak to your health and care professionals and tell them about the reasonable adjustments you or your loved one need.
